How the Clubs Stand.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

NATIONAL LEAGUE. New York Pittsburg

Washington, 12; Philadelphia, 5. Every one of the forty-three hundred spectators that went out to welcome the Washington Club home from its recent victorious career at Boston got more than his money's worth yesterday afternoon. when the Manning aggregation stacked up against the Athletics, the Brotherly Love city representatives in the American League. All the confirmed rosters were present, with their lung power right up Garvin to the highest capacity, the Het Air Coterir occupying a conspicuous position on the left field bleacheries, equipped with megaphones and symbols of the select organization-red toy balloons. On the other end of the same stand were located a small battalion of Geler's friends and they gave the local boy a rousing reception. particularly when he came to bat in the first inning and was presented with a diamend ring and a floral horseshoe. The latter was carried out by a little girl dressed in white, who conveyed to ballplayer Geler the request from his admirers that he "line it out." He did not live up to the traditions of his profession, however, for the second ball that Mercer will be he is certainly all right. He cantured two difficult flies very handily, but it was no the bat that he demonstrated his superiority. Fraser was an easy mark for him, and out of four times at the bat he lined out four clean singles. He wanted to repeat the performance in the seventh inning, but Fraser had become wise and handed him up four bad ones. "Bill" Coughlin was not far behind his fellowplayer in the matter of hitting, either, The clever little third beseman seems to have struck his batting gait at last, and the official scorer yesterday chalked up three rattling bits to his credit. Coughlin had an off day in his fielding, however, but his errors did not materially affect the result, especially the one he made in the last inning, when Fultz hit a sharp one down toward third, which Coughlin picked up cleanly, but without taking his customary aim shot the ball over into the right field bleacher.

Mercer was in good form after he emerged from the cannonading in the second inning, when the Quakers rolled up four runs. His support in this inning was not what it should have been, and two of the hits credited to the visitors were of the scratch variety. After this second inning, though, Mercer flung out his anchor to windward, and remained stationary in the vicinity of the pitcher's slab during the remainder of the game, and until the last inning, when he let up in his steam considerably, the visitors could not get a man across the plate. Pitcher Fraser was assaulted in the first inning by the local batsmen for a couple of hits, which, with a hit by pitched ball, given to Clarke, and a present of a base on balls to Clingman, netted the home team two runs. At no stage of the game thereafter did he prove a puzzler for Mr. Manning's hired men, and the locals seemed to be able to chase men around the bags whenever they feit so inclined.

Farreil distinguished himself by making a beautiful running catch of a fly from Fultz's but in the first inning. The ball was headed directly for the fence, midway between the centre and left, when the Senator made a dash in that direction and grasped the ball with one paw while on a dead run. Clingman also made a stop that was of the circus variety in the fifth inning, when Geier banged a vicious one almost directly on a line over second base. In his mad rush for the whizzing sphere Clingman stuck out his mit and the ball evinced a fondness for it and safely lodged there, as much to the surprise of Clingman as to the crowd, who cheered the play lustily and gave the local shortfielder a round of applause as he came in from his hunting ground a moment later.

Washington sent two men across the plate in the first inning on Fultz's failure to properly field Quinn's hit, Foster's singie, Farrell's base hit, and Everett's out The real fun for the locals started in the fourth, though, when Coughlin opened up the seance with a rattling drive for one base. He was immediately followed by Mercer walking to first. Farrell then was kind enough to send up an easy fly to Fultz, but Dungan, taking a reef in his belt, smashed out a beautiful single to right field, scoring Coughlin. He was immediately followed by Quinn, sending another one in the same locality, and en-abiling Mercer to trot across the plate, hits by Seybold, Powers, Fraser, and Geier and Coughlin's error. They were not able to get a man across the plate again until the final inning, when Mur-phy opened up with a two-base hit, and scored on a passed ball.

This will give the "fans" an idea of the proceedings: WASHINGTON. oster, L. f.
